What do places in the Ku-ring-gai Chase National Park and Muogamarra Nature Reserve tell us about the past? How are people connected to these places and how can we care for them?

Starting with an optional bush tucker tasting presentation, the students will discover how Aboriginal people utilised the resources of the area.

During a bushwalk through one of these bushland areas, the students will explore the Aboriginal features of these special places, including visiting engraving sites, tasting some of the local bush tucker and creating their own mini shelter or hand stencil.

This fieldwork day supports the Geography Syllabus content focus People and Places and the History Syllabus content focus The Past in the Present..

This program runs in Muogamarra Nature Reserve (Terms 2,3 only), West Head and Bobbin Head.
